Relevant Coursework:

Server-Side Web Development

Development of server-side application services and APIs using current code libraries and frameworks (Node.js, Express), as well as utilizing databases.

Advanced Application Development

Development of complex applications through the use of APIs in Java and Kotlin. Learned and used common data structures (hash tables, trees, stacks, queues, networks) and design patterns for API development.

Web Development:

Create interactive, dynamic web sites using common web architecture and object-based database access.

Interactive Web Scripting:

Advanced scripting with JavaScript and the Document-Object Model (DOM) for creating web pages.

User-Centered Web Design:

Learned principles of interactive design and used semantic HTML and CSS to produce standards- and accessibility-compliant web pages.

Prototyping Methods:

Created working low to mid-fidelity prototypes from both physical and digital software that demonstrate a range of design patterns for interactive systems.
